AUSTIN, Texas – When Longhorn Village, the first and only retirement community developed in association with the Ex-Students' Association of The University of Texas, culminated its extensive search for the first Medical Director of its new Health Care Center, the ideal candidate happened to be located just down the block within the Steiner Ranch master-planned community.

The Health Care Center at Longhorn Village has named Gwendolyn Miller, M.D., of Steiner Ranch Primary Care and St. David's North Austin Medical Center, as its new Medical Director. Dr. Miller, who brings with her an extensive and impressive 17 years of experience in the health care field, will be responsible for providing guidance, leadership, oversight and quality assurance for all health services required by the community's residents.

"It is a privilege to have the opportunity to practice medicine in this wonderful Steiner Ranch community while serving the residents of The Health Care Center at Longhorn Village," said Dr. Miller. "It is fulfilling to be able to devote 100 percent of my time to true patient care, and I look forward to working with the outstanding health services team at The Health Care Center at Longhorn Village to provide the very highest level of care."

Dr. Miller began providing personalized care to the Steiner Ranch community in June 2008. As an Internist specializing in adults, geriatric medicine and women's health, she has earned a strong reputation for her medical knowledge and is known for treating patients with true Texas hospitality.

Dr. Miller was born in Lamesa and grew up in Temple. She attended Texas A&M University and received a Masters in Biochemistry. Realizing her true passion was to help people, she went on to medical school at The University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston. She spent her residency in Internal Medicine at Presbyterian Hospital of Dallas.

Dr. Miller began her career at Austin Diagnostic Clinic, practicing there from 1991 to 1995. She has also held such positions as Supervising Physician and Medical Director of Baylor Senior Health Center and Associate Professor of Clinical Internal Medicine at the University of Vermont Medical School. She is a proud member of Alpha Omega Alpha, a prestigious medical school honor society, and during her career has been recognized in her field by receiving The Sandoz Medical Achievement Award and the American Medical Women's Association Recognition Award.

“We are extremely pleased to bring Dr. Miller on board to serve as Medical Director at The Health Care Center at Longhorn Village,” said Eve Maily, vice president, sales and marketing for developer CRSA Management, LLC. “Her extensive experience speaks for itself, and her commitment to proactive wellness programs and activities will be a tremendous asset as we open the community and implement our truly comprehensive suite of health services for the residents.”

The Health Care Center, located on the campus of Longhorn Village, will offer a diverse and comprehensive package of health services to residents, spanning from assisted living to memory care and skilled nursing care. The facility and its programming will be managed by CRSA, the developer of Longhorn Village that is nationally-recognized for excellence in senior housing and health care services. The high standard of service to residents will be made possible by early-stage assessments of resident health histories followed by convenient, around-the-clock care to match each individual’s needs. Care will revolve around a commitment to serving each resident as if they were at a health care resort.

In addition to Medical Director services, St. David’s North Austin Medical Center and The Health Care Center at Longhorn Village will jointly plan health fairs, clinics, lectures and diagnostic screenings at the community involving the hospital’s health care professionals and physicians. Residents also will have the opportunity to meet the staff, tour the Emergency Room and learn about the comprehensive health care services, latest life saving technology and nationally recognized patient care programs available at St. David’s North Austin Medical Center.
